

HANOTAUX TELLS POWERS' SECRETS.

Plain Statement That Crete Will Be Freed from the Rule of the Sultan.

France's Prime Minister Declares That European Diplomacy Aims Always to Preserve the Peace.

"Dangerous Pretensions" of Greece Restrained Because They Threaten War--Cannot Acquire More Territory at Present.

By Julian Ralph.

(Copyright, 1897, by W. H. Hearst.)

London, Feb. 23.—The people of Europe once looked to England for plain, straightforward speech in moments of tension like this over Crete, but to-day we know better what the single independent citizen thinks and better what the cunning politicians of Italy are planning than we know the views of the cold-blooded man who leads England in this crisis.

England's only voice was the roar of guns leveled at Crete on behalf of the filthy Turk. Even when the Government was brought to book in the Commons last night its spokesman was either throttled or his statement was evaded.

Hanotaux's Brave Words.

It was not till this morning that the extreme strain of Europe was relieved by the honest and frank utterances of France's premier, M. Hanotaux. His words are already committed to memory wherever men gather from one end of Europe to the other. I give his words in extenso. Speaking in the Chamber last night he said: "European diplomacy has little by little formed first into privileged provinces, then later on into principalities or independent nationalities, Greece, Roumania, Servia and Bulgaria. It is that diplomacy which at Samos, in Roumelia and in the Lebanon enabled the Christian and Moslem populations to live peacefully side by side under the protection of its mighty guarantee. "The problem which has been solved in the Balkans has now arisen afresh with regard to other provinces. Can Be Peacefully Solved. "It is not beyond the power of European concert to cope with it and solve it peacefully, and to that end the European concert will direct its efforts and with all the better prospect of success that the attention of Europe will not be turned aside by initial efforts. "Is it not already a great step accomplished to have obtained from the Sultan the handing over of Crete in trust to Europe? The first result is the securing to the Christian population of the island the blessing of an autonomous administration. Restraint Placed on Greece. "But if, on the contrary, one people, for whom Europe has ever evinced so much sympathy, has launched into a war of conquest—which may lead to a general war by giving rise to other ambitions—if its designs threaten the peace of Europe, has Europe not the right to interfere for the purpose of restraining such dangerous pretensions? "That is the decisive point, the keynote of the present situation in Crete, of the admirals' guarantee of public peace and the security of Christians. "The simultaneous presence of all the fleets gives us assurance that no one power can resort to isolated action for its own benefit. Turkey Out for Good. "Moreover, it is a guarantee that the island will never more be replaced under the direct Turkish administration, but it also secures quite as effectually the respect for that territorial integrity of the Ottoman empire of which Europe stands in need; for once that integrity is infringed on one point it must collapse on every side. "If one of the powers—great or small—claims to derive some personal profit from the present crisis, how could it be possible to check the others' ambitions? The Macedonian question would immediately be raised and bring about the gravest events. "Crete Will Be Free. "There is no mistaking his meaning. The Sultan surrendered Crete to the powers, and the powers intend that the Sultan shall never own a foot of it again, for it is to be made as independent of Turkish rule as is Bulgaria. This is unmistakable and positive, and the great news of the day.

By some hocus pocus the Sultan is made to believe that his dominions are not yet to be partitioned, which means simply that no more than Crete is to be shaved off Turkey just at present. Nicholas, Hanotaux and Salisbury arranged the deal, Kaiser William being outvoted.

ORDER OUT THE GREEKS.

King George's Forces Given Twenty-four Hours in Which to Evacuate Crete.

Paris, Feb. 23.—The Gaulois asserts that the powers have called upon Greece to evacuate Crete within twenty-four hours, and that Greece has consented to do so provided that the autonomy of the island be guaranteed.

A Week's Armistice.

Canoe, Feb. 23.—The foreign consuls have persuaded the Moslem and Christian combatants in the Selino district to agree to a week's armistice.

Autonomy for Crete.

Vienna, Feb. 23.—The Fremdenblatt says that the powers are on the verge of an agreement as to the method to be pursued to restrain Greece from further hostile action in Crete and to settle the future administration of the affairs of the island. Lord Salisbury's proposals favoring the granting of autonomy to Crete, under the administration of a prince of Greece, the paper says, have virtually been adopted by the powers.

Strict Blockade Maintained.

Athens, Feb. 23.—A dispatch to the Asy from Cania says that the foreign warships are now rigorously blockading the coast of Crete. The British torpedo boats are especially active, rapidly stemming along the coast and keeping a sharp lookout to prevent the landing of troops, provisions or munitions of war. Many vessels have been stopped by the blockading fleets and not allowed to proceed until they satisfactorily proved that they were engaged in legitimate business. So strict is the blockade that the carrying of letters to the Ploesus from the force of Colonel Vassos, the commander of the Greek army of occupation, is prohibited.

Turkey Preparing to Fight.

Constantinople, Feb. 23.—It is announced here that the Cretan difficulties have been settled upon the basis of autonomy for the island, the Porte nominating the Governor of Crete under the assent and approval of the powers. In view of the possibility that Greece will oppose such an arrangement, large quantities of munitions of war are being hurried to the Greek frontier and the Turkish troops there are being rapidly reinforced.

Orders Kept Secret.

London, Feb. 23.—In the House of Commons today George N. Curzon, Parliamentary Secretary to the Foreign Office, said, in reply to an inquiry upon the subject, that the signal for the bombardment of the insurgents' position at Cania was given by Admiral Canavaro, of the Italian navy, as commander of the united fleets, by reason of seniority.

A. J. Balfour, replying to the request made yesterday by Sir William Harcourt that the instructions given to the British Admiral at Cania be laid before the House, said that he was compelled to decline to comply with the demand, as it would be impolitic to do so.

DOES LEO EXPECT WAR?

Nuncio Goes to St. Petersburg to Ask Protection for the Constantinople Patriarch.

Washington, Feb. 23.—A significant point in the Greco-Turkish trouble reached Washington today. The Pope is about to send a nuncio to St. Petersburg. It is considered at the Apostolic Delegation as an indication that a general European break-up is much more imminent than at present suspected. The Russian Ambassador to the Holy See, M. Isvolsky, has been quite diligent of late in presenting to the Papal Secretary of State, Cardinal Rampolla, all information referring to vacant episcopal sees and vicarates apostolic in Russia. He has urged the Secretary to fill all these offices promptly, since the Czar desired that his Catholic subjects should have adequate pastoral care.

The new nuncio is said to be Mgr. Lorenzelli, the present nuncio at Munich, one of the most astute politicians of the Roman court. Rome is considered the central point of European diplomacy. It is believed here that the Vatican is informed of the secret intentions of great powers, and that the action of the Pope in sending a personal representative to the Czar is to insure the protection of the Catholic patriarch of Constantinople, Mgr. Azarins, and of other episcopates in the Turkish empire.

WOMEN FOR SALE-- GOING, GOING, GO! HUSBAND WAS THE VENDOR

A Mother and Her Daughter Knocked Down for $100.

HUSBAND WAS THE VENDOR

Giuseppe Carisino Had Quarrelled with His Wife Over His Stepdaughter.

MADE THEM "LOT 1" AND "LOT 2."

Shrewd Antonio Violino Bought the Pair and Boasted That He Could Sell the Younger Woman at a Handsome Profit.

Lot 1—Maria Carisino, aged thirty-five; well preserved; naturally appearance; very strong, and can fetch and carry as well as a man; also cooks well.

Lot 2—Clara Carisino, daughter of the above, aged eighteen; very beautiful; intelligent; handsome; high spirited and need watching, but otherwise good tempered; will be as strong as her mother.

The above will be offered at public auction, without reserve, by Giuseppe Carisino, husband of Lot 1 and stepfather of Lot 2. Bidders will not be discriminated against.

Giuseppe Carisino did not issue a circular like that, simply because it was not necessary. But although a conceit of the fancy, the above announcement conveys quite accurately what was scheduled to take place and what did take place at East Portchester on the night of Washington's Birthday. Two women, a mother and daughter, were offered for sale by their legal guardian, and after spirited bidding were knocked down to a friend of the family who had been the older woman's suitor at an earlier stage of her career.

The auctioneer, who was also the vendor, to say nothing of being the husband and stepfather respectively of his human merchandise, is a quarrelsome of Italian harbor. Giuseppe Carisino is no mere laborer. Indeed, by comparison with his neighbors of his own race, he is a veritable nabob. It was in his cottage at East Portchester, where he had been living with his wife and stepdaughter, that this remarkable auction took place.

World Be Rife of Both.

Carisino and his wife had been quarrelling bitterly about Clara. The man did not approve of the woman's methods of bringing up her daughter, and she, in turn, did not like his. He was resolved to rid himself of them both by the same means. He killed two birds with one stone, so to speak. Hence it happened that the countryside was apprised of the important fact that the quarrelsome woman and her daughter were to be sold at public auction on Monday night. One of the first to hear the news was Antonio Violino, Maria's former lover. Antonio knew that she was a sturdy creature, albeit a trifle less bright of eye, and smooth of cheek, since the time she had been paid over to her stepfather. He was sure that she would be a useful chattel in his household. So he went privily to Carisino, and asked him how much he would take for her. "Nay, nay," quoth the quarrelsome. "The money is no better than another's. Come to the auction at my house, and thou shalt have a fair chance." On the appointed night Carisino's cottage was crowded with men of the colony. There had all parties freely of beer, and the party was a merry one. Merriest of all were the women—Lot 1 and Lot 2. On the occasion they sat together on the table, the better to show off their "points," and chattered gaily with the prospective purchasers. More later was served to all by the hospitable Carisino, after which he mounted upon a chair and asked for bids. At the last moment he had resolved to sell both the women in one lot.

Two Women for $100. An admirer of Clara's offered $15. The snapping of musketry the bids jumped to $20, $25, $30, and so on, to far beyond the $50 mark. Most determined of the bidders was Antonio Violino, who was to him finally that mother and daughter were knocked down for $100.

Violino paid the purchase money out of his pouch, and after more beer had been drunk all round he left for New York with his newly acquired property. "What will you do with the girl?" asked one of his friends before he left. "Oh, as for Clara," he replied, shrugging his shoulders, "I have a relative in the city who will be glad to take her for her. As for me, I have not made a bad bargain." Yesterday the unstable Carisino was sorry for having parted with his spouse, who was really very useful, in spite of her temper. He started for New York to find her, saying that he would give $200 to get her back.

SHOTS HIT THE BRIDGE.

Passengers' Lives Imperilled by Unknown Persons Who Fire Through the Windows of the New York Terminal.

In the plate glass windows on the south side of the New York Terminal of the Bridge are twenty-two bullet holes. Each hole is small, but each bullet or buckshot went clear through the glass and made irregular cracks in each pane.

Five of the holes are in the panes on the balcony, the other seventeen in those fronting the platform at which trains arrive and depart. President Berri's attention was called to the holes yesterday. "I did not know that they existed, but I will investigate the matter at once. Bullets fired at random, as these seem to have been, are likely to injure or kill somebody." Captain Ward, of the Bridge police, when called upon by the president, said: "Three months ago some of those holes were discovered by my men. We made an investigation, and we satisfied ourselves that they had been made by somebody who had been firing air guns. As a result of our investigation, the shooting stopped. I am surprised to hear that it has been resumed." The shooting has been resumed, for three new holes have appeared in the glass within the last three days, the new ones being on the balcony, a few feet from the central stairway. It is supposed that a crowd of young men, who on occasions congregate on the roof of the terminal, No. 35 Frankfort street, are responsible for the shots that have placed the lives of so many passengers in peril. President Berri and Captain Ward will continue their inquiry to-day.

"SPANKTOWN" BATTLE DAY.

Railway Celebrates the Defeat of the British by General Maxwell in 1777.

Railway, N. J., celebrated yesterday the 120th anniversary of the "Battle of Spanktown," which was fought in the lower part of that city February 23, 1777. At Spanktown, a lower Railway was called "Spanktown." The American forces under General Maxwell on that day defeated the Third British brigade, that came up from Perth Amboy. The American loss was 200 killed and twelve wounded. The British loss, killed 200.

The village was called Spanktown on account of a Rev. Mr. Hubble paddling his wife one morning just after breakfast with a pancake turner. After a quarrel he chased her to the street and publicly chastised her. The house they lived in is still standing at No. 118 Main street, and is known as the Jackson-Freeman house. It is over 150 years old, and was used as a physician's office for more than 100 years. The celebrated physician, Dr. Samuel Abernathy, who died February 13, 1874, was the last old physician to occupy it.
